Best Things to Do in Sri Lanka

When you are in Sri Lanka, you should actually try hiking the Ella rock. This is an unexplored and serene part of the country. You can hire a local guide or reach the top with the help of the locals, as the hike is a bit confusing, but this giant rock offers you a truly unforgettable view. You can even plan to stay at Ella and experience the authenticity of this small local place. The people are really warm and welcome tourists with open arms.

As rich as the wildlife of Sri Lanka is, so are the safari tours. You are sure to witness wildlife with such close proximity that you will literally feel in mother nature's lap. The elephant safari at Udawale National Park is not to be missed. You will see the largest mammals on earth walking in herds, and you will feel their stops in your heartbeats. If you really keep your eyes open, you will catch the grand spotted leopards in the Yala national park. These cunning cats are usually sitting on branches or basking in the shade, so be sure to keep your eyes open.

This is the most beautiful experience to be experienced. Camping right in the middle of the forest and experiencing mother nature in such close proximity is something worth experiencing. The guides here are also so friendly and so close to nature that you will love to spend hours listening to their interesting stories. Moreover, you will also watch leopards and crocodiles in their natural surroundings and enjoying themselves to the fullest. Be sure to upgrade your photography equipment to the best if you're going to plan camping.

Indulge in watersports at the Madu river or the beaches in Bentota.
